A lead from TrekMovie's This Week In Trek column sent me looking for Star Trek MiniMates by Art Asylum. According to Wizard Universe, the first wave is popping up for sale online right now. The first wave (below) includes:

Capt. Kirk and Vina, the Orion Slave Girl (left); Spock and Captain Pike; Scotty and Dr. McCoy; Scotty and Dr. McCoy (Special edition)

The Cadet's Mess

Star Trek MiniMates were originally released in 2002, however, only one 'wave' was ever released with the second wave being cancelled. These original series figures are still available online, for example at Star Trek Toys Online where you can see the whole line of the original MiniMates: Trouble With Tribbles Cpt Kirk, Mugatu, Gorn, Khan, McCoy

Two years ago, Art Asylum made a deal with Diamond Select Toys giving them the rights to market and

... A prize will go out to the first cadet who can find out the name of the Star Trek episode that this clip is based on!

In a Southern Cross scoop I can tell you that Diamond Select Toys have just announced the second wave of Star Trek MiniMates!

"The second series of Star Trek MiniMates (illustrated below), ...features Battle Damage Kirk & Gorn, "The Cage" Spock & Uhura, Sulu & Chekov and the limited Swashbuckling Sulu! These 2" Minimates feature 14 points of articulation and a variety of accessories from the classic franchise!"

distribute their Star Trek toy range - they do much more than the MiniMates! The major difference between the old series and the new is that the original MiniMates were a 3 inch (76mm) figure whereas the new ones are 2 inch (50mm). This is going to be the new standard for the little Art Asylum dudes who are very poseable with a total of 14 points of articulation!

In fact they are so flexible that people are using them to make animated fan films! Get Mum or Dad to show you the MiniMate Star Trek movie on YouTube ... <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Zsjhh7EC7fc>

Kirk with a torn shirt and Sulu wielding a rapier? Yup, this is classic Star Trek ok!

STOP PRESS!

Ron Caudillo, is to release his fan-made card model of the Original Series Enterprise bridge in a scale to suit the 2 inch MiniMate figures!
